Good morning to you all and thank you for your continued partnership! As you know, things with SB 150 continue to evolve and this email is to share where we are currently.

As everyone knows, college-level courses may contain mature content not typical in a high school environment. Additionally, we have received feedback from you, our partners, regarding the list of courses that may be impacted by SB 150 that we provided earlier.

Having said that, the students in the attached list(s) (which includes all completed enrollment since August 11, 2023) are currently in courses that may fall under the provisions of SB 150. Do you and the parent give permission for the students in the attached list to be in the class(es) or would you like us to find them another class? Please confirm by Tuesday, August 15, 2023 if you would like us to remove students from any of the courses in the attached list. .

Please let us know if you have any questions. As always, I want to thank you again for a great partnership.

Sincerely,

Stephanie,

Good evening! Most of the classes on your list require parental permission. There are two courses (SOC 101 and COM 252) that some of your students are taking that I want to make sure you have all of the materials to review to determine if you wish to offer. If you want us to remove your students from any of these courses, please let us know by Tuesday, August 15.

Thank you!

Wendy

Hey,

I have a 7th grade science teacher who wants to read a book to her class for an Enrichment block. Any ideas for books that are high engagement and revolve around science themes/topics?

I am meeting with 3-5th grades this week to show them how to use SORA. I woke up in the night worrying about it. HA! Has the E-library been weeded yet according to SB 150? I don't want to show it to them yet if it hasn't. Just wanted to check with you.

Ditch That Textbook

Practical teaching & tech ideas for class tomorrow

Monday, August 28, 2023 -- 525 words, 2 minutes

📖 Get my book, AI for Educators, for less than $10 USD! 📖

The Kindle ebook edition of my book, AI for Educators, is only $9.97 USD! Understand AI. Think through implications for your classroom. Learn how it can save you tons of time! Get it in Kindle ebook -- or in paperback -- here.

📖 New template: Interactive resource room

We know how much you LOVE a good "make a copy" template, so here's a brand new one!

During remote teaching in the pandemic, these "Bitmoji classrooms" were popular. They're still very useful today, though!

Make a copy of this template in Google Slides or PowerPoint and ...

- Add a Bitmoji or other digital avatar of yourself (1)
- Put a link/image to a featured resource on the laptop on the table (2)
- Add a collection of images/links on the board (3)
- Include links to extra digital activities and resources (4 & 5)
- Link up other things as fun "Easter eggs" like this world clock (6)

BONUS: This template has lots of suggestions already built into it, including four interactive resource room examples on the "inspiration" board!

Two easy ways to share this with your students:

- Share a published link by going to File > Share > Publish to the web and copying the link
- Embedding it in your learning management system (like Canvas or Schoology) by going to File > Share > Publish to the web and copying the embed code

Make a copy of the interactive resource room template here!

TEASER: Coming tomorrow: "What's cheating" AI graphic!

In the past, I've shared a graphic from an AI conference presentation (which you can find here) about rethinking "plagiarism" and "cheating" with AI.

Since then ...

- It's been circulated on social media a BUNCH, sparking conversations about appropriate AI use in the classroom
- Teachers have used it as a discussion point with students about appropriate AI use
- Staffs have discussed it in staff meetings
- It's been published in TikTok videos, in blog posts, in presentation slides, even in other books!

It's on page 81 of my book, AI for Educators, by the way.

Tomorrow, I'm publishing an expanded version of the graphic with TWELVE examples of AI assisting in student creation.

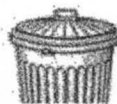

I'll accompany it with a blog post giving details about each of the examples -- and some extra content to guide decision making.

Keep an eye out for that tomorrow!

Benefits of Structured Instruction in K-12

To help teachers & students succeed, schools need a systemic approach to curriculum creation and implementation. Learn how structured instruction improves student outcomes in this playbook.

Illness, climate events start another school year with cancellations

While many of these in-person learning disruptions are temporary, educators and families remain concerned about academic recovery.

Highlighter vape pens add new layer of haze to school prevention efforts

Schools are getting creative in how they address vaping as a wider range of disguises for the devices make it easier for students to conceal them.

Majority of adults support higher pay, more influence over curriculum for teachers

Some 66% of adults said teachers are underpaid, and 67% said they support raising educator salaries through increased property taxes, a PDK poll found.

DRAFT:

I've attached a list of books we (the entire teaching and learning team) reviewed, read summary reviews on, and found that they comply with SB 150 and can be returned to the middle school library collection. This is a draft list that I'd like you all to review. If you feel it is sufficient, I thought you would want to send it to Brian and Jackie.

Thanks,
Stephanie
